A HEBREW COLONY IN CHINA.

SUPPOSED TO HAVE SETTLED THERE 2,400 YEARS AGO.

First Discovered by a Jewish Priest-Faith is Rapidly Declining and New They Pay But Little Attention to the Ancient Customs of Their Religion.

For more than two thousand years there has been a colony of Jews established at Kaifengfu, China. The exact date of their entrance into the country is not known, but it is supposed from a tablet found in their synagogues at that place that they must have appeared there about 500 B. C., although it may have been as late as 18 A. D. It is not until the third or fourth century that they are mentioned in Chinese annals, says the Cleveland Leader, when their synagogue is referred to by a Chinese writer as a "heaven spirit monastery. Western Persia is given as their starting point, by which Persia is probably meant, because of the number of Persian words which are used by the Chinese Hebrews. Mr. Ezra, who is an authority on the subject, thinks that there is no good reason for the theory that the Chinese Hebrews are descended from the ten tribes. There are many references to these Hebrews from the year 878. An Arabian writer mentions them as one of the sects that perished in a general massacre at Khanfu, but in 956 and 958 there are records of the Chinese district officials conferring honors on Hebrews, and in 1163 the erection of a synagogue was begun in Kaifengfu. Hebrews were invited to Pekin to Join the imperial army. In the fifteenth century there were many Hebrew communities in Chipa. The best information we have about these communities comes through the Jesuits who entered Pekin at the end of the sixteenth century.

The discovery of the Chinese Hebrews was made by Father Ricci, one of the first Jesuits to enter China.

Early in the seventeenth century, one summer day in Pekin, a visitor, prompted by rumors of the arrival of certain foreigners who worshipped a single God and yet were not Mohammedans, called on Father Ricci. The missionary, noticing the difference of features from the ordinary Chinese, led him to the oratory and knelt on his knees before a picture of the Virgin with the infant Jesus and St. John the Baptist. Nearby was another picture repre-

on his knees before a picture of the Virgin with the infant Jesus and St. John the Baptist. Nearby was another picture representing four of the apostles.

The visitor knelt also, remarking, "We in China do reverence our ancestors. This is Rebecca with her sons Jacob and Esau, but as to the other picture, who make obeisance to only four sons of Jacob; were there not tweive?"

Returning to the former apartment mutual explanations followed and an unforeseen solution ensued. The stranger was a Hebrew, Ngal by name, who had come to Pekin from Kaifergfu to procure literary honors. He stated that in his city there were some twelve families of Israelites, with a fair synagogue, in which they preserved a roll of the law more than four hundred years old, and in Hangchow; the capital of Chekiang, there were many more families, also with a synagogue.

Scattered over the length and breadth of China there were others of his sect, but these were gradually being lost, from having, no meeting place. When shown a Bible in Hebrew he confessed his inability to read it, though he recognized the characters. He said that his preference for Gentile literature subjected him to many reproaches from the chief of the synagogue. Father Ricci was able to test the truth of these statements, and despatched some reproaches from the chief of the syngogue, Father Ricci was able to test the truth of these statements, and despatched some Chinese Christian messengers to Kaifengfu for purposes of investigation, and soon received visits from other native Hebrews.

The condition of the Chinese Hebrews has been declining very fast since that time. A missionary in 1866 found them in an impoverished condition. They had been obliged to tear down a part of their syragogue to sell it. Finally, some thirty years later, a society for the rescue of these people was established, and in response to an urgent invitation eight Chinese Hebrews left Kaifengfu for Shanghai. They arrived in that city in March, 1802, where they were cordially received by the Hebrew colony. Questioned as to their observance of their ancient religion, these Hebrews admitted that their faith was rapidly declining. At present they do not observe any of the ordinances of the Hebrew religion, nor do they observe the idolatrous practices of the heathen. Many of them have been scattered, but there still remain to the seven clans about one hundred and forty adults. Their condition is so deplorable that they have no leader, no synagogue and no school for their children.

SURFEIT OF MOOSE MEAT. The Experience of a Party of Prospectors in Alaska.

From the Washington Post. In journeying down one of the tribu-taries of the Tanana River, in Alaska, with a party of prospectors in 1902 our raft went to pleces on a drift and every pound of pro-visions, cooking utensils, bedding and pretty nearly all the clothing of the outfit, as well as a didy sum of money, went to the bottom," said P. J. Habberton of Seattle.
"Luckily I managed to save my Winchester and a few rounds of ammunition, and if it had not been for that I believe we would have come pretty near starving to death, as the place of the accident was 100 miles from any settlement or roadhouse. My gun was the only one that was saved, and never did one come in handier. We trudged along, shivering and greatly depressed at our loss, but such is the elasticity of the pioneer adventurer that upon my shooting a big bull moose about sundown the whole party began to get in better heart, and even to jest about our predicament.

"We cut out the best parts of the flesh of the moose and made a hearty supper. Little then did any of us think that we would be confined to that single article of food for four long days. Now, moose meat isn't back but to have to eat it for sixteen straight bad, but to have to eat it for sixteen straight meals, unrelieved by a grain of salt or pepper, is a hardship such as I hope never to experience again. Long before the dawn of the fifth day how we did loathe the very sight of the solitary item of our bill of fare. Some of the party experienced extreme nausea, but marching over the snow is hard work, and the pangs of hunger would drive them again to the monotony of the moose menu. Well, when at last we got to a roadhouse and found that plenty of beans and coffee were to be had a shout of joy went up that tent the heavens. I had $10 left from the flood and every cent of it went for just one meal. I think we ate for two hours, then went to sleep, woke up and went to eating again, until not a bean was left. I wouldn't even at this far day from that gastronomic tragedy partake of a chunk of moose meat for the weight of the animal in gold."
